11:45	Leadership isn't a fixed quality or magic power. It is more like a muscle that can be strengthened with training. It is centred on strengths of character that can developed. Drawing on research into leadership development at the University of Oxford and recent examples form around the world, this talk highlights some of the character qualities at the heart of good leadership. It will leave you with three practical ways you can grow as a leader in your own context.

14:45	How 5 strangers spent 42 days rowing across the Atlantic and finished as friends.
15:00	with David Edwards, Wellington College  In December 2019 David Edwards rowed 3000 miles across the Atlantic as part of the “Felix 5” – one of 32 entries in the Talisker Atlantic Challenge. The 18-month project placed an emphasis on organisation, team building and relationship management. David will talk about the importance of self-awareness, empathy and generosity of spirit when leading and operating as part of a team in challenging circumstances. He will also talk about the importance of chocolate.		This session offers an overview of the concept of flourishing—or complete well-being, at the individual, community, and global levels—and how leading with love is necessary to skilfully promote flourishing across these domains. Although it is sometimes difficult to reach an enduring consensus about a definition of love, I argue that whatever else the word love might mean, it must at minimum honor the inherent worth of all people and encourage their growth in the direction of deepest flourishing. I suggest that effective leadership grounded in this spirit of love empowers benevolent social action and creates a more abundant world.	15:00 – GSL Inspire Hear from our socially conscious young leaders as they share what matters to them and what they have learnt along the way.

With its rigorous focus on standardisation and age-based testing – our education system leaves little room for the maverick and the creative. What needs to change?
